

Students in John Middleton's 7th grade science class at Evarts Elementary recently constructed plant and animal cells. Students modelled the organelles found in each cell to better understand cellular composition and function.

